

The Effect of Suspending Prisoner Child Support Payments on Violent Crime

Note: This figure displays the effect of suspending prisoner child support payments on violent crime. The reported coefficients are from an event-study model estimated using de Chaisemartin and d'Haultfœuille (2020). Outcome data is from the FBI Uniform Crime Reporting program. The model controls for state demographic characteristics such as age, race, educational attainment, and a Bartik measure of the employment rate. Each point is a relative time parameter estimate. The bars extending from each point show the 95 percent confidence interval calculated from standard errors clustered at the state level and obtained with 99 bootstrap iterations.
